DOWN MEXICO WAY—Direct, single-carrier air service between the Western States and Mexico City was made possible when the Civil Aeronautics Board awarded the 1,564 additional route miles shown above to Western Air Lines this week. Three-hundred-mile-an-hour seven-hour service in 52-passenger luxury liners will be established with the cooperation of the Mexican government.

Mexico City Air Line Now Authorized

The Civil Aeronautics Board has awarded Western Air Lines authority to establish an air service between Los Angeles and Mexico City, with intermediate stops at San Diego and at La Paz, Lower California. The authority granted by C. A. B. would permit a direct, single carrier service from the Western United States and will mean local service between Los Angeles and Mexico City. The line will add approximately 1,564 miles to Western Air Lines' 4,303 miles of routes over the Western United States. Leo H. Dwerlkotte, executive vice president of Western Air Lines, declared that the decision of the board is recognition of the fast growing community of interest between the Western United States and Mexico. "Western Air Lines is proud that it has been chosen as the airline to furnish the direct service between the Western United States and Mexico. Direct service will materially assist the good neighbor policy of these nations and further cement the relationship desired under this policy. With the cooperation of the Mexican government, Western Air will establish the new direct service as soon as possible. To this end Western Air will establish contacts with the government of Mexico immediately. Western will be able to inaugurate the service with DC-4 Sky-master, 44-passenger planes and when the ten DC-6, 62-passenger planes now on order are received, will establish 300-mile-an-hour service, flying the 1,564 miles from Los Angeles in approximately seven hours, including stops at San Diego and La Paz, Mr. Dwerlkotte said. Western Air Lines has proposed a fare of $79.00 for the flight from Los Angeles to the Mexican capital.

OPA Lists Items Suspended From Price Control

Bias tape, narrow fabrics other than woven or braided, and web belts, straps, slings and haters are being suspended from price control effective today, the OPA said. None of the items is sold in any great volume or contributes significantly to the cost of living. Bias tape, usually sold in five and ten cent stores for home sewing before the war, is not an important textile item, and present "freeze" prices do not cover increased costs. The cotton narrow fabrics involved are those fastened with adhesives rather than being woven. Used chiefly for tying packages, their closest competitors are narrow woven fabrics, already suspended from price control. Similarly, web belts, straps, slings and animal haters are suspended because these articles are made by the same manufacturers that make webbing, which was suspended from price control along with woven and braided fabrics.

AMERICAN RAILROADS During World War II American railroads handled 50,000,000 tons of high explosives for military use as well as huge quantities of poison gas without a single person being killed. Approximately seven hours, including stops at San Diego and La Paz, Mr. Dwerlkotte said. Western Air Lines has proposed a fare of $79.00 for the flight from Los Angeles to the Mexican capital.
